Even more on offer at this weekend's Producers Market

Even more local producers will be on hand in Altrincham this weekend to give residents the chance to get some last minute alternative festive treats.

Following the first producers market last month additional stallholders have signed up for the second market this Sunday 19 December. Four more local producers will be joining the market which last time featured more than twenty producers from the region including free-range meats, local fruit, vegetables, plants and herbs, regional cheeses, butter, organic free-range eggs and apple juice, artisan cakes, puddings, breads and pastries as well as pâté, hand crafted chocolates by master chocolatiers and homemade jams, pickles and preserves. Among the new traders joining the market will be Claire Burt from Burt's Cheeses in Altrincham and Cheshire based Pippo who will both be showcasing their produce including home made blue chesses and biscotti.

Organiser Giles Pocklington said: "I am delighted we have got even more fantastic produce to bring to Altrincham for the second producers market and with this Sunday being the last one before the holiday it's an ideal chance to stock up with the freshest meat, locally grown vegetables, cheese and other treats for the big Christmas dinner."

Leader of Trafford Council Matt Colledge said: "The last producers market was a great start for this regular event and by attracting more producers to the town this will hopefully give people an insight into what great produce is on offer in the area. This weekend is a great chance to get hold of some quality locally produced food to help make the holiday period a little different this year and I would encourage everyone to take a look."

The producers market is this Sunday 19 December between 10am and 2.30pm and will continue on the third Sunday of the month in the New Year.
